The Kent State University Press and Kent State University's Institute for the Study and Prevention of Violence are pleased to announce a new book series

Violence Prevention, Intervention, and Policy

Under the editorship of Daniel J. Flannery, the series seeks to publish important new works in the interdisciplinary areas of violence prevention, intervention, and policy. The series is unique in its focus on applied, community-based work and its integration of prevention, intervention, and policy related broadly to violence and violence prevention.

The Editor Daniel J. Flannery, Ph.D., is Professor of Justice Studies and director of the Institute for the Study and Prevention of Violence (ISPV) at Kent State University http://dept.kent.edu/ispv/index.html. Prior to founding the Institute, he was associate professor of child psychiatry at University Hospitals in Cleveland. His primary areas of research are in youth violence prevention, the link between violence and mental health, and program evaluation. His research has appeared in Developmental Psychology, the New England Journal of Medicine, and numerous other journals. He is author of Violence and Mental Health in Everyday Life: Prevention and Intervention for Children and Adolescents (2006) and coeditor of the recently published Cambridge Handbook of Violence Behavior and Aggression. He received a Ph.D. in Clinical Child Psychology from The Ohio State University.

The Series Violence Prevention, Intervention and Policy is unique in its multidisciplinary focus, its applied nature, and its blending of research, practice and policy. The series may include individual works as edited volumes, single-authored books, or monographs that focus on a specific prevention, intervention, or policy topic related to violence or violence prevention. New works are being sought on a variety of topics including, but not limited to:

- Multidisciplinary work on evidence-based practices that seek to prevent or respond to violence and violent behavior
- Practical evaluation for applied research in community-based settings
- Treatment outcomes for behavioral health in juvenile and adult justice populations
- The impact of violence on child and adolescent mental health and well-being
- Law enforcement practices related to violence, terrorism, and security, especially those that involve collaborations with other public and private systems
- Research that seeks to integrate work on prevention, intervention, and policy related to violence and violence prevention

Proposals and inquiries may be addressed to:

Joanna H. Craig, Editor-in-Chief
The Kent State University Press
307 Lowry Hall  PO Box 5190
Kent, OH 44242
jhildebr@kent.edu

OR

Daniel Flannery, Director
Institute for the Study and Prevention of Violence
230 Cartwright Hall  PO Box 5190
Kent State University
Kent, OH 44242
dflanne1@kent.edu